- 15.2. In the event of a data breach at Socialis Legal which has adverse consequences for the privacy of the person involved, Socialis Legal will inform the person involved without delay.

Article 16. Cookies

- 16.1. Socialis Legal uses functional cookies.
- 16.2. A cookie is a small text file that is stored in the browser of the device of the person involved on his first visit to the website.
- 16.3. Socialis Legal only stores tracking cookies in case the person involved, prior to his visit to the website, has given permission to store them. Before the person involved has given permission concerning storing tracking cookies, only functional cookies will be stored which do not affect the privacy of the person involved.
- 16.4. The person involved can opt out of the storing of cookies by configuring his internet browser in such a way that it no longer stores cookies. In addition, the person involved can also delete all information previously stored through the settings of his browser. The person involved can obtain more information about switching on and off and deleting cookies in the instructions and/or the help functions of his browser. Functional cookies are necessary for the correct functioning of a website. The removal of functional cookies by the person involved may have consequences for the functioning of the website, which may prevent Socialis Legal from providing its service or failing to do so properly.
- 16.5. Types of cookies and purposes:

The party that places the cookie	The type of cookie	The purpose for which the cookie is placed
Socialis Legal	Functional cookie	Functional cookies ensure that the website functions properly. These cookies are used, for example, to facilitate that the person involved can log in to the website. Functional cookies ensure that the person concerned is recognized on a subsequent visit to the website. On a subsequent visit, the person involved does not need to log in again on the website.

Article 17. Submit a complaint

- 17.1. In case the person involved believes that the processing of personal data by Socialis Legal has not been carried out in accordance with the privacy policy and/or with due observance of the applicable laws and regulations, the person involved may submit a complaint to the Data Protection Authority.
